GAVE LIFE TO SAVE BOY ALREADY DEAD BY ELECTRIC WIRE

Trying to Rescue Victim, Trolley Inspector Is Hurled to Ground and Killed.

TRAGEDY FATAL TO 3.

Boys Returning From Swimming Run Foul of Feed Wire.

A widow and six children, the oldof whom is only fifteen, found consolation to-day in the fact a Union Railway inspector, of Eightieth Street, died a hero. His life was an unnecessary sacrifice, but he gave it up promptly in an effort to save a buy he did not know was dead.

The tragedy, which cost the lives of the man and two boys, and injured two other boys, occurred late I resterday at One Hundred and Beventy-seventh Street and Bronx seventy-seventh Street and Bronx Park Avenue. When it reached the middle of the bridge, Fulton vaulted the fron fence and dropped a dozen feet to the top of the nearest freight car. Then he ran to the next car, where the Robel boy lay grasping the cable.

The inspector placed his hands under Robel's shoulders to jerk him quickly from the wire. As he touched the hoy the powerful current struck him, and he was hurled clear of the car and to the ground, landing upon earnestly: WHY THE SPRINGS OF ROMANCE DRY UP.

"Oh. it's pitiful! The weak ones yield to temptation and go under—from sheer lack of a normal social life, and not because they want to be bad. The strong ones, the girls who ought o marry and rear splendid, fine children, bury themselves in their work and let all their springs of romance

"And young men in a large city need a municipal marriage bureau even more than girls need it. The latter are better protected by social customs; then, too, a woman can make a home even out of a hall bedroom. A man can't. And honest, clean boys from the country come to a bin from the country come to a big city like New York, are practically isolated from the nice young women they ought to marry—and would like to marry—and as a consequence are the

"As I see it, there is just one logical alternative to the municipal matrimonial bureau, where, as a part of the civic plan, young people are encouraged to meet freely and openly, to fall in love and to marry the mate of their choice. The other procedure would be to shut up boys and girls in separate convents, the walls forty feet high, and when they arrive at marriageable age to sell them to the best bidder. The State is the worst sufferer from our present scheme of hit-or-missingly missimatrimony.
